EXPERIMENTAL MASTER'S DEGREE IN EDOLO

The fifth year of the Master's degree in Agro-environmental Science started on 7 September 2009 at the University Campus in Edolo.

Ten students are following the course on "Mountain basin management – forest-hydraulic systems" held by prof. G.B. Bischetti. The course is taking place in the new University building and includes theory lessons, field trips and laboratory practice.

The next course will be on alpine fauna and students will also be carrying out an investigation on the deterioration of conifers due to forest scolytids.

The Master's degree in Agro-environmental Science is divided into two curricula:

"Quality of the environment and territory" and "Protection and Enhancement of Mountain Areas".

Considering the large amount of students attending the undergraduate course on mountains at the Edolo campus of Università degli Studi di Milano, and thanks to support from the Province of Brescia, department of Innovation and Technology for Young people and University, part of the master's degree course will be held at the Edolo campus.

The decentralization of the last year of the master's degree will also allow students to use the new laboratories in Edolo not only for teaching purposes but also for thesis work, encouraging research on important topics connected with the development of mountain areas.

This experimental course should then lead to the setting up of a master's degree course entirely in the mountains depending on the number of students, benefits for the area and efficacy of the programme.
